Meet the local organisers

Dear colleague

Welcome to the University of Wrocław! It is a great honour and pleasure for us to host the ECPR General Conference. We hope you enjoy the conference and your stay in our amazing city.

Thursday 5 September

The first of our two Thursday Roundtables, led by Gabriela Pleschová, looks at how to support innovation in teaching and learning in political science. The next, chaired by Monika Wichłacz, addresses the diverse dimensions of the populism phenomenon.

In the evening, we invite you to a plenary lecture by Grzegorz Ekiert of Harvard University. Entitled Civil Society and Democracy: A Reconsideration, the lecture takes place at the National Forum of Music. This modern city-centre building, completed in 2014, was one of the most important institutions in Wrocław's 2016 European Capital of Culture year. The lecture is followed by a reception at the same venue.

Friday 6 September

Friday's Roundtables will focus on two widely discussed phenomena. The first, moderated by Isabelle Engeli, is entitled Gender, Inclusivity and the Good Profession. The second, chaired by Agnieszka Makarewicz-Marcinkiewicz, will focus on Sustainable Development in a Contested World.

See pages 14–17 for more details on all our Roundtables.

The Institute of Political Science

The Institute is currently preparing for its 50th anniversary. Part of the Faculty of Social Sciences, it was established in 1969, and began teaching in 1974. Today it is one of Poland's most important political science research centres. The Institute implements national and international research projects, and its employees author highly regarded publications.

The Institute conducts research activity in political theory, political thought, international relations, social and economic policy, communication, political marketing and political systems, among other fields. In the latter, it has created the so-called Wrocław system school, widely recognised here in Poland. The Institute also publishes the journals Wrocław Political Studies and the English-language Polish Political Science Review.

Our Institute's didactic offer includes bachelor's and master's degrees in political science, social project management and state security management, as well as doctoral studies and numerous postgraduate studies, all carried out in Polish and English. The Institute also regularly organises summer and winter schools.

After hours

If you find some time to explore our city, we strongly recommend visiting the main building of the University of Wrocław, the Cathedral of St John the Baptist in the Ostrów Tumski district and the Panorama of the Battle of Racławice, all of which are within walking distance of the Conference venue.

We wish you a successful conference, a fruitful exchange of scientific experience and a pleasant stay in our multicultural city!

Mayor's welcome

Ladies and gentlemen

We are living in interesting times. I am writing this as a sociologist, who has recently focused on a very practical aspect of sociology. Working within municipal self-government, including my almost year-long service as the Mayor of Wrocław, sometimes I remember the peace and calm of the lecture hall. I have to admit that, quite often, I miss those deep academic discussions and analyses. Due to my current responsibilities, I have less time for participating in such studies; however, I frequently read papers and reports published by the academic world. Among the foundations of my programme for Wrocław were findings of Wrocław Social Diagnosis, which was developed based on scientific methodology. As a matter of fact, the Diagnosis is a project that we are constantly working on.

I would like to share with you my reflections on the special role of science – the social sciences in particular – in today's polarised world. When political choices seem to be quite surprising and emotions among the public are often stoked up by politicians and the media, we all need some space for peaceful discourse. This discourse should be based on a factual, in-depth analysis of the world's problems. It is the scientific realm that I see providing an objective space for discussion. We know that the primary role of scientists is discovering the truth about our world. It is not a domain reserved exclusively for the natural sciences. I think that this is also your task, as representatives of the humanities. While doing our research – and I hope to stay close to the academic world – we have to preserve a maximum objectivity, humbly accepting that sometimes our findings contradict our personal views and beliefs. This is very important.

I am very happy that ECPR has chosen Wrocław as the host city of its 2019 General Conference. I am glad that so many professors and students from all around the world will visit our city. I wish to congratulate the University of Wrocław on the successful organisation of the event. I would like to thank the Faculty of Social Sciences, the Convention

Bureau and the Office for University Relations – a special municipal unit dedicated to development of our relationship with the academic world – for their great work on coordination of the activities.

And the most important thing: I wish all of you a time well spent in Wrocław – both inside and outside the lecture halls.

Jacek Sutryk
Mayor of Wrocław

Academic Convenors

Dear colleagues

On behalf of the ECPR, welcome to our General Conference which, at the time of going to press, features 67 Sections, 456 Panels and 1,887 Papers. The varied programme includes Roundtables, Receptions, Featured Panels, and a Plenary Lecture by eminent scholar Grzegorz Ekiert, Civil Society and Democracy: A Reconsideration.

The Conference has established itself as the largest regular event for European political science, with around 2,000 participants and steadily growing submissions of Sections, Panels and Papers. Section proposals for next year's event at the University of Innsbruck can be submitted from 16 September.

We are grateful to all those who helped make this event happen. Special thanks to the Section Chairs, local organisers, and to Louise Soper and Diane Towler of the ECPR.

We wish you all a great conference!

Oddbjørn Knutsen
University of Oslo

Anna M. Sroka
University of Warsaw

Maurizio Carbone
University of Glasgow

Oddbjørn Knutsen is Professor of Political Science at the University of Oslo. His research interests lie in comparative politics, with special interest in European politics, political psychology and sociology, electoral behaviour, value orientations and ideology, and methodology and statistics. His most recent publication is The Nordic Models in Political Science: Challenged, but Still Viable? (Fagbokforlaget, 2017).

Oddbjørn Chaired the Norwegian PSA from 2010–2017 and was Chair of the Nordic PSA, 2011–2014. He was on the Executive Committee of the European Confederation of Political Science Associations 2010–2016, and is a member of the Research Council at EUI in Florence, from 2014–2019. Oddbjørn was chair of the local organising committee for our Oslo General Conference in 2017.

Anna M. Sroka is Assistant Professor at the University of Warsaw. She completed her doctoral thesis, The Spanish Road to Federalism, at the Institute of Political Science, University of Wrocław, and her habilitation (second dissertation) on Accountability in Studies on the Quality of Democracy: the Cases of Poland and Spain at the University of Warsaw. She is visiting professor at the National Distance Education University (UNED) in Madrid and has lectured in Berlin, Konstanz, Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia.

Anna's main research interest is the quality of democracy. In 2015, she led the local organising committee of our Joint Sessions in Warsaw.

Maurizio Carbone is Professor of International Relations & Development, and Jean Monnet Professor of EU External Policies, at the University of Glasgow.

He has taught previously at the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, Duke University, Johns Hopkins Bologna, University of Rome Tor Vergata, and has held official visiting research positions at Université libre de Bruxelles, University of Canterbury in New Zealand, European University Institute, University of Cambridge, Sciences Po Paris, University of Cologne, and University of Bologna.

Maurizio's research is related mainly to EU external relations, particularly foreign aid and other development-related policies. He is also interested in European integration, international development, and Italy's role in the international arena. He was local organiser of the 2014 ECPR General Conference in Glasgow and is a founding editor of the journal Contemporary Italian Politics (Taylor & Francis).

The European Consortium for Political Research

An independent scholarly association that supports the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists

Events

Each year, the ECPR organises the Joint Sessions of Workshops, Summer and Winter Schools in Methods and Techniques, and the General Conference. A new event for young scholars, the Futures Lab, launches next year.

Journals and book series

ECPR co-publishes four leading journals: European Political Science, European Journal of Political Research, European Political Science Review and the European Journal of International Relations. It also publishes the Comparative Politics book series, with Oxford University Press. This year saw the launch of a new Open Access journal, Political Research Exchange, published with Taylor & Francis.

ECPR Press

In 2005 the ECPR launched its own imprint: ECPR Press. The Press

publishes high-quality Monographs and collections of Essays, along with a small selection of Classics that have made a significant contribution to political studies scholarship. Now published in partnership with Rowman & Littlefield International, the imprint also includes a highly respected series of multi-authored, edited volumes, Studies in European Political Science, many of which have developed from Workshops and Panels at ECPR events.

Standing Groups & Research Networks

These are groups of researchers, in many cases formed at ECPR events, with a shared scholarly interest. Some are small, maintaining only a website and mailing list; some organise major conferences and summer schools, and produce their own publications.

There are currently more than 50 Standing Groups, covering many sub-fields of the discipline. Groups and Networks are intrinsic parts of the ECPR, and are fully supported in their activities.

Prizes

Each year, the ECPR marks its members' achievements by awarding a number of prizes. These prizes cover the spectrum of a scholar's career, from the Jean Blondel PhD Prize to the Lifetime Achievement Award.

Membership

ECPR membership is institutional and is open to any university involved in the teaching or research of political science. Membership entitles staff and students at member institutions to benefits that include funding, reduced event fees and access to ECPR publications.

While membership is paid by the university, it is the individuals within it who receive the benefit; from master's and PhD students, through to the most senior professor.

The ECPR currently has some 330 institutional members worldwide. These include 47 of the top 50 European universities according to the QS World Rankings 2017. This figure has grown steadily over recent years, and equates to a network of some 26,000 political science scholars worldwide with MyECPR accounts.

ECPR governance

The ECPR's Executive Committee (EC) is a Board of twelve Trustees, elected by the Council of Official Representatives. The EC, which meets twice a year, is responsible for the day-to-day running of the ECPR, as well as its long-term development. To make this task more manageable, members are grouped into five portfolios covering the spectrum of ECPR's work. Drawn from ECPR Full-Member institutions, EC members are elected for a six-year term, staggered so that six members are elected every three years.

Martin Bull
ECPR Director

ECPR Director

In September 2013, Martin Bull (University of Salford) was appointed as the ECPR's first Director. Martin oversees ECPR operations, and advises and assists the EC with the organisation's strategic direction.

He has considerable experience in ECPR matters, having served as its Academic Director 2006–2013, and on its Executive Committee 2003–2006. Martin's term of employment ends on 31 September, after which he will be replaced by our newly appointed Director, Tanja Munro. Find out more about her below.

ECPR Chair

The Chair is elected by the EC every three years, coinciding with the changeover between

Kris Deschouwer
ECPR Chair

Committees, and as such they serve a three-year term.

The current Chair is Kris Deschouwer (Vrije Universiteit Brussel) who will serve until April 2021. The Chair takes the lead in the strategic direction of the organisation and works closely with the Vice Chair, as well as chairing meetings of the Executive Committee.

In recognition of the need to have a Chair experienced in ECPR business, in the preceding autumn the outgoing EC elects a Chair Designate from those members who have another three years to serve.

New Director

We are delighted to announce the appointment of Tanja Munro as ECPR Director. Tanja takes up her role on 1 October, replacing Martin Bull when he completes his term of office. Her appointment marks a change in the post of Director from secondment of an academic to a full-time, permanent position based at ECPR's headquarters in Colchester.

Before joining ECPR, Tanja was Chief Executive of a UK housing charity, and prior to that held a variety of posts in the charity sector, covering events, communications, finance, fundraising and research. She also holds a Master's degree in International Relations.

Tanja describes herself as 'A transformational leader working in the third sector, specialising in relationship management and strategic planning to realise efficient practices that unite people under a common goal.' Tanja therefore has the perfect background to help ECPR realise its goals in the challenging times that lie ahead.

Tanja joins us here in Wrocław to experience her first ECPR event – please make her welcome!

ECPR Council

The ECPR's highest level of governance is its Council, comprised of one Official Representative from each member institution. Council performs a number of functions, including electing the ECPR's Executive Committee (EC) every three years, receiving annual reports from the EC and voting on elements of constitutional reform. Council meets once a year, at the General Conference, and as such will meet this year in Wrocław on Wednesday between 17:00 and 18:00, in the Oratorium Marianum (ground floor).

Speaker of Council

The Speaker's responsibilities include chairing Council meetings; proposing amendments to the Standing Orders of Council; liaising with the Executive Committee over business matters and the formulation of the agenda of Council meetings; serving as Senior Returning Officer for Executive Committee elections and votes on amending the ECPR Constitution; and being a general liaison point for members of Council vis-à-vis the ECPR.

Thomas Poguntke

Our newly elected Speaker is Thomas Poguntke, Chair of Comparative Politics and Director of the Düsseldorf Party Research Institute at Heinrich-Heine-Universität Düsseldorf (PRUF). Thomas will serve a three-year term.

University main building

University of Wrocław

With more than 25,000 students, 3,000 staff members and over 300 years of history, the University of Wrocław is one of the most important academic centres in Poland

The University has a wide and interdisciplinary spectrum of educational offers in natural and social sciences, and in the humanities. Within its walls, there are ten faculties and several other independent units. The University actively cooperates with the city of Wrocław, with the regional administration of Lower Silesia and with many other universities, NGOs and enterprises in Poland and around the world.

Academic offer

Students may choose from around 90 bachelor's and more than 100 master's degrees at the faculties of Biology, Chemistry, Languages, Mathematics & Computer Science, Physics & Astronomy, Biotechnology, Earth Sciences & Environmental Management, Historic & Pedagogy Sciences, Social Sciences, Law, Administration, and Economics. The University also offers 60 postgraduate and many doctoral courses, with the range broadened each year.

Architecture

The University is not just an educational institution, but an integral part of the city. The jewel in its crown is the magnificent baroque Aula Leopoldina, with one of the most beautiful interiors of its kind in the whole of Europe. Other well-known elements of the main building are the Oratorium Marianum and the Mathematical Tower.

History

The University dates back to the eighteenth century when the Leopoldinian University was founded. In 1945 it was reorganised as being under Polish administration. Naturally, the year 1989 marked the beginning of a new era of transformation and internationalisation.

Alumni

The University can also boast eleven Nobel Prize winners, who worked or studied at the University during German times: Albert Ludwig Sigismund Neisser, Theodor Mommsen, Philipp Lenard, Eduard Buchner, Paul Ehrlich, Fritz Haber, Friedrich Bergius, Erwin Schrödinger, Otto Stern, Max Born, and Hans Georg Dehmelt.

Finally, many happy returns to the The Institute of Political Science, which celebrates its 50th anniversary in 2019!

Out and about in the city

Located near the geographical midpoint of Europe, Wrocław is truly a meeting place: of people, culture and ideas

A rich, turbulent and fascinating history makes Wrocław one of the most characterful and scenic cities in Poland. Situated on the Oder river and its 12 islands, with around 130 bridges, it is known as the Venice of the North. The diversity of city's inhabitants and its unique atmosphere has earned the city the nickname 'Wroclove' – a place in which you can fall in love.

Each year the Main Square (one of the biggest in Europe), Cathedral Island Ostrów Tumski and the UNESCO-listed Centennial Hall are visited by many travellers.

Among other attractions worth seeing are the Zoological garden with its extraordinary Afrykarium, Raławicka's Panorama, the Nadodrze district and many museums and cultural institutions.

In 2016, Wrocław was the European Capital of Culture, and the city hosts many cultural events and festivals, the biggest of which is the New Horizons film festival. Each year, the winter and summer fairs attract thousands of visitors, and Wrocław's atmospheric Christmas market is the biggest in Poland.

European Political Science Prize

This £500 prize, generously supported by Palgrave, is awarded to the author of an article in the journal European Political Science which contributes to the understanding of new trends in political science, or offers an innovative approach to teaching and learning in the discipline. All EPS articles except reviews and keynotes are eligible for consideration.

The 2018 prize goes to Matthew Flinders, University of Sheffield, for his article The future of political science? The politics and management of the academic expectations gap: evidence from the UK.

Political science has for some time been afflicted with an existential and empirical angst concerning impact and relevance. This is by no means a new or unique disciplinary pathology, but it is one that has intensified in recent years.

The reasons for this intensification have been explored in a burgeoning literature on 'the tyranny of impact'. The central argument of Matt's article is that a focus on the 'relevance gap' within political science, and regarding the social sciences more generally, risks failing to comprehend the emergence of a far broader and multifaceted 'expectations gap'.

The article's core argument is that the future of political science will depend on the politics and management of the 'expectations gap' that has emerged. Put slightly differently, the study of politics needs to have a sharper grasp of the politics of its own discipline and the importance of framing, positioning, connecting vis-à-vis the broader social context.

From our prize jury

'In his timely wake-up call, Matthew Flinders addresses the challenges of political science as a profession in a changing world. The author skilfully combines sharp analysis of the discipline in light of fundamentally altered public expectations towards it with a passionate call for creating a new balance between internal expertise and external engagement. His suggestions for a 'new politics' of political science are as compelling as they are inspiring, and should not fail to engage political scientists across Europe and beyond.'

Matthew Flinders is Professor of Politics and Founding Director of the Sir Bernard Crick Centre for the Public Understanding of Politics.

Hedley Bull Prize in International Relations

This annual €2,000 prize is awarded for a published monograph deemed a substantial and original contribution to theory and/or empirical studies in international relations.

The winner of the 2019 Prize is Arjun Chowdhury, University of British Columbia, for The Myth of International Order: Why Weak States Persist and Alternatives to the State Fade Away (OUP 2018).

The book provides a macro-revision of key domestic and international explanatory theories of state formation and international system development, and offers an array of empirical implications for small and large states as well as colonial and post-colonial states.

From our prize jury

'The book is written in a lively and eloquent style, full of wit and a feel for the right anecdote to illustrate a general point, and an ease with which cultural and anthropological knowledge is integrated in a general theory of international relations that amply justifies a prize in the political science of international relations.'

Plenary lecture

The University of Wrocław has invited Grzegorz Ekiert to deliver this year's lecture, Civil Society and Democracy: A Reconsideration

The idea of civil society resurrected in the 1970s has been one of the most important concepts guiding reflection on political transformations of contemporary societies. The general interest in the role and functions of civil society has evolved into a multifaceted research program across many social science disciplines that generated thousands of empirical projects and publications and engender analytical innovations and debates.

The dominant neo-Tocquevillian view posited a close affinity between the strength of civil society and successful democratisation and subsequent consolidation of democracy. Yet there is growing evidence that strong civil society is a necessary foundation not only for democratic but also for authoritarian rule. This implies that civil society can be mobilised for either liberal or illiberal projects or that it has a pillarised nature that can be politicised along the lines of prevailing political cleavages.

In this lecture, Grzegorz discusses various understandings of the concept and the asserted role civil society has in shaping political and economic outcomes. He will contrast the established consensus on the role of civil society as a political project and a set of normative principles with disagreements about how civil society is defined and measured, how it evolves over time, what dimensions of politics and public policy it shapes and what are the mechanisms through which it affects the quality of democracy, resistance to authoritarianism and consolidation of authoritarian rule. In short, he will discuss what we have learned during the four decades of studying civil society and its relation to states and political regimes, and whether it is time to give up this research program.

Biographical note

Grzegorz Ekiert is Laurence A. Tisch Professor of Government at Harvard University, Director of the Minda de Gunzburg Center for European Studies, and Senior Scholar at the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies.

His research and teaching interests focus on comparative politics, regime change and democratisation, civil society and social movements, and East European politics and societies.

His current projects explore civil society development in new democracies in Central Europe and East Asia, state-mobilised contention in authoritarian and hybrid regimes, and patterns of political and economic transformations in the post-communist world.

Grzegorz is the author or editor of six books, edited volumes and special issues of journals. His papers have appeared in numerous social science journals in the US, Europe and Asia, and in many edited volumes. He is also a member of the Advisory Board of Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin für Sozialforschung, External Examiner in Politics, Public Administration and Global Studies at the University of Hong Kong and Member of the Club of Madrid Advisory Committee.

Face(t)s of Populism: Varieties of Trump Cards

Is the current far-right turn in Europe its new Zeitgeist, the radical transformation of political landscape, or just a temporary systemic crisis that soon will be overcome? It is highly problematic if the numerous and diverse cases of anti-establishment, radical right, far right, alt-right, extremist, anti-pluralist or anti-systemic parties can be all put under the umbrella term of populism. The fact that it is used in public discourse with excessive latitude and frequency doesn't make the job any easier. It is even more precarious for the cohesion of academic debate itself, since the term provides a typical example of the essentially contested concept. Populism can be conceptualised as an ideology, type of political communication, specific type of political culture, mode of political claims-making, social movement, political rhetoric, political discourse, particular input into a political system, style of political mobilisation, etc., etc. Such vagueness, in consequence, leads to problematic eclecticism in research on populism. Nevertheless, as Paul A. Taggart suggested, adopting a contextual approach seems to be justified – different forms of populism are highly determined by the type of political system, political culture, social and economic conditions, time, and so on. If populism is treated as a 'dependent variable', more appropriate attention should be placed not only on its supply side (strategies and techniques of populist/anti-establishment parties) but also on demand, such as psychological dispositions, political sentiments or social attitudes of citizens.

These difficulties are just a few of the many faced when trying to capture the nature, scope and consequence of this democratic crisis in Europe. It involves answering (among many others) questions like:

Is right-wing, exclusionary populism an inevitable consequence of the culture of fear underlying modern societies?

If so, in which ways can the rise of the radical right be perceived as a product of the systemic and socio-cultural crisis of liberal democracy?

Can the radical right still be perceived as the anti-establishment challenge to business-as-usual politics, or does it already constitute a permanent element of the European political scene?

Monika

If that is the case, what are the possible paths of its long-term evolution?

What are the strategies of the mainstream parties and other institutional/political agents to strengthen and protect the pillars of liberal democracy?

And finally, since populism seems to be omnipresent nowadays, is it just one of the ways politics is made – or is it the very essence of politics itself?

How to Nurture and Support Innovation in Political Science Learning and Teaching

We all like variety – not doing the same things all the time. We also appreciate novelty: if someone engages us in an enterprise that is positively surprising, creative and enriches our knowledge and experience. This is why students love classes that are different from what they have experienced before. Yet, designing a class that uses an innovative learning method is always tricky because of the inherent risks that students will fail to understand or appreciate the new method or will not learn well due to some unforeseen difficulty.

The purpose of this Roundtable is to discuss how institutions can encourage and support teachers to introduce new teaching and learning methods for the benefit of student learning. It aims to answer several central questions, including:

What are the pin-up teaching and learning methods that fit well the needs of the current generation of students? What are their effects on student learning?

Who are the frontrunners in providing first-class learning opportunities: are they traditionally recognised universities or can we see new champions of teaching and learning who use novel learning methods?

What does 'innovative teaching' mean in different contexts: does it count as innovative if a teacher applies a method that is frequently used at another institution or in another country?

What are the best ways for institutions to inspire and support teachers to innovate in their classes as well to recognise those teachers for their leadership role?

The Roundtable will gather a group of political scientists known for their role as innovators and supporters of colleagues' innovations, along with educational developers whose role is to assist and guide teachers while improving students' learning experience. The Chair and Speakers will provide examples of teaching innovations from those included in Gabriela Pleschová's latest book (written with Agnes Simon, Masaryk University) and from elsewhere. The Roundtable should result in a publication in an academic journal.

Gender, Inclusivity and the Good Profession positions and full professorships.

In addition, political science has been experiencing an increasing level of external expectations for tangible outputs and impact. In some countries, programmes and research streams have even been placed under political scrutiny, including gender-related programmes.

This Roundtable takes stock of the progress and remaining barriers towards equality and inclusivity in political science.

How can we foster change in academic gender relations?

What are the gold standards for a good profession?

What is the future of gender equality and diversity policy in neoliberal universities?

The Roundtable brings together speakers with extensive experience in studying gender and diversity politics in higher education, researching gender and diversity in hostile political environments, and with experience in running the academic publishing process and the potential gender bias and exclusionary practices it may involve.

The participants come from a broad range of geographical and subfield backgrounds to stimulate a wide-ranging reflection on the responsibility of the entire political science community in moving towards the goal of an inclusive, gender-equal profession and simultaneously protecting scholars studying contentious topics from oppression.

The Roundtable addresses macro- and micro-level dynamics. In relation to the former, it explores how current transformations in higher education and the political environment affect the promotion of gender equality and inclusivity in the profession. On the latter, it is an opportunity to reflect on academic norms that privilege specific life choices and intersectional experiences of inclusion and exclusion.

We will not seek to come up with definite answers to what the 'Good Profession' is, but we will explore the implications of the topics for the future of political science.

The promotion of gender equality and inclusivity in political science is at a crossroads. While progress has been made towards gender equality and inclusivity in academia, a number of challenges remain to be tackled in order to achieve a good profession.

On the one hand, awareness for a more equal profession has raised among the scholarly community and professional associations, and a number of actions have been taken in this regard.

On the other hand, systemic prejudices and structural inequalities remain across a number of aspects in the profession, including gender patterns in citations, collaboration on grants and publications, representation among gate-keeping

Sustainable Development in a Contested World

Sustainable development aims to develop mechanisms that allow civilisation's progress without degradation of the environment and natural resources, while pursuing the socio-economic aspirations of contemporary and future societies.

The process of defining and studying sustainable development is dominated by the paradigm, within which the phenomenon is divided into three dimensions: ecological, economic and social. The triple paradigm is also evident when defining the objectives of sustainable development, which are:

1. Environmental objectives
The protection of the Earth's atmosphere, natural resources and human health.
2. Economic objectives
Full employment at acceptable quality of work, adequate income, and economic development within the natural space and price stability.
3. Social (or socio-cultural) objectives
Social security, social integration and equitable life chances, quality of life and health.

The Roundtable will emphasise that such a division is not justified because it results in divided, partial implementation of these aspects in strategies and programs within public policies.

The Roundtable is built upon a holistic paradigm of sustainable development in the sense of simultaneous, collision-free implementation of all aspects of development leading to the wellbeing of societies. However, depending on the adopted axiological system and the level of socio-economic development, the paradigm and scope of its implementation is being contested. It therefore gathers representatives from all the research areas involved:

- political and social effects of climate change, including environmental justice and gender perspective

Agnieszka Makarewicz-Marcinkiewicz

- alternative visions of anti-capitalist socio-economic models
- the spiral of economic growth as a modern version of the age-old question of social relationships between the capital and work
- alternative modes of economic and social exchange, including credit unions, alternative currencies, sustainable consumption, social enterprises, and their performance in relation to and beyond the economic mainstream.

Recent moves by funding bodies towards mandating Open Access to research, exemplified by 'Plan S', are making it ever more essential for scholars in the political sciences to engage with, and understand, the diversity of publishing options available to them.

Alongside potential benefits of increased visibility and availability, mandatory OA has been criticised for potential negative impacts it may have on scholarly societies, academic freedom, and equality and diversity, especially for independent scholars and researchers in the Global South.

This Panel brings together a variety of perspectives in a roundtable format, to encourage open discussion and debate.

It is now a cliché to say that populist parties are successful. However, it is also a truism. Populist parties are present in most party systems across Europe. Their success begs the question: What has the effect of populist parties been on party systems? Have party systems been forced to react to their presence?

For example, populist parties may alter the manner in which non-populist parties compete. Or the presence of populist parties may lead to a more fragmented or polarised party system.

These are some of the questions addressed in the multi-authored volume Absorbing the Blow.

More specifically, this edited collection examines the effect of populist parties on eleven European party systems. The results are mixed.

The book finds that impact often depends on the influence that populist parties have had on mainstream political parties – those that hitherto dominated party competition. In some instances, populist parties reinforce existing patterns of competition and government formation. Party systems that were bipolar continue to be bipolar. In others change occurs, either because populist parties make it difficult for mainstream parties to form coalitions that were hitherto possible, or because their presence allows mainstream parties to form coalitions that were not previously conceivable. This collection seeks to analyse the way in which mainstream parties absorb the blow of populist party activity, and concludes that populist parties are one of several factors contributing to changes in party systems.

Using this edited collection as a starting point, first, the Panel will present the book's framework for assessing the impact of populist parties on party systems and party system change. Second, the Panel will allow several of the book's contributors to reflect and update on the conclusions from their chapters, and from the book.

In sum, the Panel will assess the influence that populist parties have had on contemporary European party systems.

Given recent developments in East and Western Europe, the European Parliament election this spring, and the 30-year anniversary of the fall of the communist regime, it is imperative we look at the effect that East European member states have had, and continue to have, on the European Union.

As political developments in certain East European countries resonate with a number of rightwing political parties in Western Europe, the connection between the 'state' of illiberalism, the refugee crisis, and other pressing political issues, such as Brexit, raise questions about the future of Europe.

In this Panel, four renowned scholars whose research touches upon various related topics will discuss the role of East European countries in the EU.

We will discuss voting behaviour, EU enlargement, and the impact of European integration on national politics, in terms of public attitudes and party politics, including the emergence and development of Eurosceptic discourses.

Recursive Representation and Democratic Innovation

In the face of democratic deficits many citizens feel they are not being heard — creating fertile ground for populist politicians who promise to change the status quo. In this Panel, Jane Mansbridge offers the concept of recursive representation, an iterative process where representatives and constituents take in what the other is saying, update, revise, and respond to one another.

This Panel also clarifies what innovations can enhance the capacities of citizens to enter the democratic process on an equal basis with their representatives and educate their elected representatives about their preferences.

Edana Beauvais

James Fishkin and Graham Smith offer examples of democratic innovations that promote recursive representation in representative systems.

The ECPR Code of Conduct

ECPR is committed to providing a safe and welcoming environment for participants at all our events and activities. This includes Instructors and Teaching Assistants, ECPR staff, and local staff, along with exhibitors, editors and authors, where applicable.

ECPR expects all participants to conduct themselves in a professional and respectful manner towards all fellow participants at all times. Harassment, unprofessional or inappropriate behaviour undermines the principle of equity at the heart of our events and activities, is inconsistent with the principles of the ECPR, and should not be tolerated.

Examples of unacceptable behaviour include:

- persistent, unwelcome solicitation of emotional or physical intimacy
- persistent, unwelcome solicitation of emotional or physical intimacy accompanied by real or implied threat of professional or physical harm
- intimidating, harassing, abusive, personally derogatory or demeaning speech or actions
- prejudicial actions or comments related to actual or perceived gender, gender identity, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, ability, socioeconomic status, age, or religion
- deliberate intimidation or stalking
- inappropriate photography or recording
- sustained disruption of panels, talks or other discussions
- physical assault, including unwelcome touching or groping

If you witness any behaviour you feel to be inappropriate, we expect you to act to mitigate or avoid potential harm to a fellow participant.

In situations where you feel a fellow participant is in imminent physical danger, alert ECPR staff, local staff or security immediately.

We have appointed two senior scholars to whom you may report any behaviour you consider to be unacceptable or in contravention of our Code of Conduct:

Yvonne Galligan – ygalligan@ecpr.eu
Hanspeter Kriesi – hkriesi@ecpr.eu

All complaints will be passed to the ECPR Executive Committee and treated in a confidential manner.

ECPR will monitor complaints for patterns of behaviour, and we will review regularly whether any action or revision to this policy may be required.

OUP Comparative Politics Series

Published in Association with Oxford University Press

Founded in 1990, this book series is devoted to the comparative study of contemporary government and politics, with a specific interest in the comparative domestic politics of institutions and political actors. Global in scope, books are characterised by a stress on comparative analysis and strong methodological rigour.

The series publishes cutting-edge, in-depth analyses on these topics, and provides a forum for scholars to share their work on themes including democracy, electoral reform, money and politics, parliaments, cabinets and coalitions, representation, political leaders and personalisation, party organisations and intra-party democracy, democratic linkage and public opinion.

Comparative Politics aims to be at the forefront of scientific debates in the field, and titles are nominated for prizes throughout the year.

ecpr PRESS

Since the ECPR's establishment in 1970, publishing research in political science and political thought has been one of its key activities, initially through journals for the profession, and subsequently with the launch of several specialised book series in collaboration with academic publishers.

In 2005 the ECPR launched its own imprint, ECPR Press, offering high-quality Monographs from young scholars and republishing out-of-print

Classics that had made a significant contribution to political studies.

Since then, the Press has expanded its scope, publishing Monographs by established scholars which had already appeared in languages other than English; and printing several volumes of general interest to the profession. In 2011 two new series were added: Studies in European Political Science and Essays.

ECPR Press now publishes original research from leading political scientists and the best young scholars in the discipline. Its scope extends to all fields of political science, international relations and political thought, without restriction in approach or regional focus.

The Press is also open to interdisciplinary work with a predominant political dimension.

In 2017, the Press entered into a publishing partnership with Rowman & Littlefield International.

European Journal of Political Research (EJPR)

Published in association with Wiley-Blackwell

EJPR is the ECPR's longest-running journal and consistently one of the highest ranking journals in the discipline. EJPR publishes original and substantial contributions to the study of comparative European politics, specialising in theoretically or methodologically original articles articulating conceptual and comparative perspectives with a broad theoretical relevance, speaking to different academic literatures on a variety of sub-fields and topics.

EJPR welcomes quantitative and qualitative approaches as well as contributions from other sub-disciplines – including international relations and political theory – and geographical areas – including North and South America – that are relevant to the comparative study of politics.

The journal also publishes short research notes, responses to previously published articles that are theoretically relevant, and state-of-the-field review articles on topics of particular relevance to the journal. It also publishes special issues and forum sections. The full EJPR archive is now available online via the Wiley-Blackwell platform.

European Political Science (EPS)

Published in association with Palgrave Macmillan

EPS is the professional journal of the ECPR; it publishes pieces on how the discipline is, can, and ought to be.

Articles address research and professional matters, doctoral training provision and teaching, as well as relations between academia and politicians, policy makers, journalists and ordinary citizens.

EPS also includes more substantive pieces that provide a political science perspective on important current events, review articles and symposia.

Boost your skills at the ECPR Methods School

The ECPR's Winter and Summer Schools in Methods and Techniques offer world-leading training in research methods for political science and neighbouring disciplines

Good research requires a solid methodology; a belief key to the aims of the ECPR and the reason for the creation of its Methods School. Launched in 2006, the ECPR's Summer School in Methods and Techniques quickly established itself as a leading event of its kind, paving the way for the first Winter School, in 2011.

More than 745 participants from across Europe and beyond have attended the last two Methods School events (the 2017 Summer School and 2018 Winter School). Besides a majority of PhD students, participants include a growing proportion of postdoctoral researchers and tenure-track or more senior scholars.

Holistic training

The School's philosophy is to offer up-to-date training across the whole range of methodologies, and across different paradigms and approaches. By combining the Winter and Summer School, researchers can follow a diverse training track of introductory and advanced courses, in various formats.

Salient methods

Delivered by experienced Instructors and supported by dedicated Teaching Assistants, the School gives researchers the methodological skills they need at different stages of their career, while a lively plenary programme encompassing free course tasters, poster sessions, and the popular 'brown bag' events, complement the academic components.

Covering methods particularly salient for research in political science, the School caters to the needs of research at macro and micro levels. Courses cover quantitative and qualitative designs, and positivist and interpretative perspectives.

The Methods School involves intensive courses and lab sessions, which require a strong commitment from participants.

“good research requires good methodology, a belief key to the ECPR's aims

Certification

ECTS Credits are granted on completion of the courses, and if you attend at least ninety per cent of course hours, the ECPR can issue a Certificate of Attendance.

Location, location

Following a three-year residency at the University of Vienna, in 2015 the Winter School moved to the Bamberg Graduate School of Social Sciences in Germany, where it is set to remain until 2020.

The Summer School takes place every July/August. Following a hugely successful ten years at the University of Ljubljana, from 2016 the event began a three-year residency at Central European University (Budapest), an internationally renowned research university with strong methods expertise.

Perhaps you took a course at this year's Summer or Winter School? Extend your studies to an advanced course in Bamberg, or next year's Summer School, and you'll benefit from a continuation of the expert teaching you've already received, PLUS we'll throw in a loyalty discount!

With a foreword by Robert D. Putnam, this book examines the limits of globalization in Europe and globally, including concepts of globalization and the role of globalization in the world. This book offers a pertinent reflection on this recent and important topic as they have evolved in the last decade, from the early days of globalization to the current state of globalization. The book is a must-read for both scholars and students in the field of globalization.

Robert D. Putnam, President of the United States and Director of the Center for the Study of Public Policy at Harvard University

"Holding the same reality much more than a single world war, this collection examines the necessary and growing role of global political and social movements in steps to address many of the issues of status, political power and identity in the US and Europe. This book is a valuable resource for scholars and students of globalization and why ongoing international movements work is essential to a more democratic world. The book is growing in the world and is a must-read for all."

By Robert D. Putnam, President of the United States and Director of the Center for the Study of Public Policy at Harvard University
